Course Description

English 4 CP will improve your reading, writing, and communication skills as you prepare to enter the workforce, study a trade, or attend college. Because you will read fiction and nonfiction texts from diverse voices as well as works you have chosen, English 4 CP will also help you consider the perspectives of others from a variety of backgrounds and experiences, a skill necessary for any path you choose in life. This course will give you the opportunity to make connections between texts and real-world experiences, write about texts and topics related to them, and discuss their themes with others. It will allow you to strengthen your ability to think about and use information to make logical decisions and present your ideas and solutions in ways that make others take notice. Simply put, this course will help you be a successful communicator long after you have finished high school.

In this course, you will consider the individual's relationship with identity, truth, work, and the world as you:

- read and analyze literature and nonfiction texts.
- write analyses, arguments, and expository pieces about topics that interest you.
- judge sources for accuracy and back up your claims with credible evidence.
- research a controversial topic related to one of your career interests.
- present an argument based on your career-interest research.
- make choices about what you read and how you complete assignments.
- proofread and revise your writing.
- communicate with your classmates about fiction, historical events, and contemporary issues.
