Course Description

German 3 is a continuation of German 2. This course emphasizes communicating in three ways or “modes”: understanding German when you read or hear it (interpretive communication), being able to present information in German either by speaking or writing it (presentational communication), and communicating back and forth with someone else in German (interpersonal communication). The goal for students is to be able to understand and communicate about simple, everyday topics in each of the three modes of communication. Communication is guided by the learned vocabulary and support structures taught throughout the course. Language is presented within the context of the German- speaking world with some emphasis on geography and culture of German-speaking countries.

Students should expect to spend one hour in each evening session once a week. The expected proficiency range for this course is Novice High-Intermediate High. The proficiency definitions used in this course are guided by the ACTFL Proficiency Guidelines.

The curriculum used in this course is guided by the South Carolina Standard for World Language Proficiency.
